up again. This time he is talking about the "widespread corruption of the Beputölean party in Washington." This from Bill Tweed's ex-Congressman, from the man who wanted to quarter a New York rough upon the Board of Public Works, is decidedly good.

Mn. HENRY REED, the editor: Mr. Smoot president of the company, and Mr. Safford, business manager of the Capital, print a denying that Mr. Platt's connection with that journal has come to an end, as has been reported. reporting a meeting of the "Democratic ion General Committee," and in review-the situation, says: "They are not, of res, so powerful now since they are with the able leaders they had before." The le leaders," we suppose, are Tweed, r R. Sweeny, Dick Connelly and the terer Garvey. Why not pass an annesty and recall them?

THE New York World cannot conceal its cloven foot. Only a year ago it was filled with the most fullowing praise of the colored people of the footh, whom it was endeavoring to win them over to Mr. Giveley and the treacherous platform upon which he stood. To-day it success at the educational efforts of these same colored people—at "Coffee as a collegian." It believes that "his best friends will regret that they do not give him less of doubtful Latin and Greek and more of the orthodox plow and spade." Why did it not add the lash and the auction-block, which was evidently in its mind?

THE APPEARANCE of the cholers in differsections of the country has, as may be urally supposed, spread a good deal of isternation in the larger cities of the ion and particularly in New York. The I in commenting upon the subject.
"Great cities, where a long winter has left its legacy of filth and disease-breeding missma, look to their Boards of Health at this lims with particular interest." The District of Columbia will look to its Board of Health for the safety of the city: but, in the first place, it is the duty of the Legislature to make the necessary appropriations. MR. MURAT HALSTEAD, editor of the Cininnati Commercial, throws out a new idea i regard to Arctic and African explorations He asks, "Has anybody ever yet proposed the use of the balloon in the exploration of Central Africa, or in the discovery of the North Pole? Has anybody ever proved that the thing would not be feasible?" We be-tieve not. Now, why does not Halstend atthere not. Now, why does not Haistend at-man in the country who is better fitted for the task, or one who could be more likely to succeed in it. He is a born discoverer. He alone has been able to find in Charles A. Dana a little virtue and honesty. By all means let him try the North Pole venture in a ballown, and let him take Dana along with him.

BENJAMIN F. BUTLER.

To look through the columns of the oppo-sition press of the country and observe the violence of the language used in speaking of prominent public men, one would suppose that billingsgate and blackguardism were essential elements of American politics, and that infamy of character had come to be the that infamy of character had come to be the criterion of political preferencest. True, as a general fact, there is no instance in which it has been more fully illustrated than in the case of Benjamin F. Butler, of Massachusetts, alike in his public and in his private career. The object of attack from all political quarters, there has been more in the total content of denunciations which partisan malice and harred have heaped upon him. Nor has it been merely from vague generalities of partisan detraction that Gen. Butler has suffered in his good name and fame. We readily recall instances of specific accusation, reflecting dishonerably upon his public conduct, but only to have their falseshood and mendacity disnonceasty upon his public conduct, but only to have their falsehood and mendacity exhibited whenever he has been fortunate enough to confront his accusers in the judicial tribunals of the country. A standing target indeed for the shafts and arrows of the most unaccontable and maliguant political enmity, it is no exaggeration to say of General Butler that, with the single exception of Andrew Jackson, no public man of America has endured a more derec and releations persecution.

of General Butler that, with the single exception of Andrew Jackson, no public man of Amorica has educated a more deree and released as the experiment of the collect and the people themselves received payment of least the base of the properties of the collect people and the people themselves received payment of least the base of the properties and the period whith that it has been possible for enemies active, unserupulous and powerfal as his have been to say or do to his injury, there can be no more certain or satisfactory vindication for General Butler than the contemplation of his earner during the civit war and the period which has since clapsest, of those circumstances which show the importance of his public services and the extent of his influence, and of the statussing position in which he stands at the present time, as an illustrious stateman—one among the greatust of the great men of the republic.

There is something unaccountable, we repeat, something phenomenal in the assiduous and obetinate vindictiveness of Gen. Butler's years by the public of the properties of paying striffs. They are permitted, now and then, to isy saide the weapons of the context and to possess their conts in the context and the context will not hostility; mo one ventures upon the privacy of their professional or domestic lives, seeking opportunity for revenge or to the upon the properties of paying the political archive and the campaigns in which the has appropriate to the ran or and illiboted of a personal quarret.

the sordid mire of seifish and debased passion—all this, sind in Ha most repulsive form of development, we have seen exemptified in the case of General Batler, in that wanton and wase than wanton disregard of all the obligations of truth, justice, honor and fair play towards him, by which the political empaign has been converted into a crusade of personal vinductiveness, pursuing with vendetia vengrance the destruction of everything estimable in private character and life. With a record during and since the rebellion, the transcendent morits of which will not seen be forgotten; the representative of one of the oldest of the Country, proud of its present pre-eminence and of its historic fame; as a citizen respected and honored in his own estimates of the country, it is under the aspects thus presented in the contemplation of General Batler's public out the indefatligable viruelence with which he is pursued, upon any principle in the code of political justice. Yet it is not possible for the Tribuse, even projudioud, wrong-headed and malicious as is its present attitude toward the Republican party, entirely to conceal from view the great facts in Gen. Butter's carvee, and in the foltowing extract we have the impiled admission that it does the work of injustice and
